PROFESSIONAL DOG TRAINING BY

BAND OF CANINES, LLC

MEET THE TEAM!

Amanda Ingraham, CPDT

Amanda Ingraham is an Army veteran with 15+ years' experience training both house dogs and Military Working Dogs. She is the current Owner/Operator/Trainer of Band of Canines, LLC. Amanda has trained with National K9, earning her professional certification in Dog Training (CPDT). She has also attended several military courses on training, handling and K9 Health while in the Military Working Dogs Corps. Amanda has earned her AKC Canine Good Citizen (CGC), Community Canine Good Citizen (CGCA), Urban Canine Good Citizen (CGCU), and Trick Dog Evaluator. She has learned to train off-leash with the British, Hungarians and Americans. Being a member of the Dog Trainers Association and a member of the International Dog Trainers Association, Amanda believes obedience is the foundation to a happy, social dog. Her training technique consists of a mix of Relationship-based training, Alpha dog training, and Reward-based and Discipline-based training techniques learned from around the world, as well as right here in America.

Brian Wright

Brian Wright has many years' experience working with and training dogs. Brian has worked with dogs of all ages and breeds and many with disabilities and abusive backgrounds. His intense love for canines with less-than-desirable histories, as well as those with disabilities instilled his passion for training. Brian believes that building a relationship and bonding with the dogs is key to training success because it makes training much more rewarding for both dog and owner. Relationship-based training combines several different training methods, but focuses on a more individualized approach for both dog and owner. It is the relationship between dogs and humans that drives everything, according to Brian! Brian has worked with various clubs and has assisted many professional dog trainers throughout his life. He has also worked with 4-H groups to help kids learn to train their own dogs.

Lexi Felton

Lexi Felton started working with dogs in 2015 as a groomer. In 2020, she started training with Band of Canines' professionals. Lexi enjoys science-based training to fully understand why dogs exhibit specific behaviors. She insists on knowing the history of dog breeds and their original purpose to help clients communicate more effectively with their dogs. Lexi strives to help dogs and their owners form teams to build a healthy co-existence that satisfies both the human and the dog. Lexi has owned multiple rescue dogs. She welcomes the challenge of taking the less-than-desirable backgrounds of rescue dogs and curbing bad behaviors by building trust and confidence. Watching dogs become happy, carefree animals and observing them as they reach their full potential brings Lexi pure joy, Lexi's other passions are personal protection training and sporting dogs. She loves getting in a bite suit and decoying, allowing dogs to display their natural drives.
